They can upload this data to other users, and it can be downloaded by other users. Users are given the ability to rate this data by “liking” it or not liking it. What is a “Like?” The rating system is the equivalent of an online thumbs up or thumbs down. The highest level of “like” is a five-star rating, with the lowest level being a one-star rating. If a user posts information, and that information is viewed by another user, then this user is able to rate the information with a “like” or not. Also, there are comments. A comment is left on a post when a user has liked the content posted by another user. Who is Your Audience? Initially, the service was developed as a way for people to follow their favorite politicians, celebrities, and businesses. Now, it has grown to be a tool by which businesses can monitor what their consumers are saying about their businesses and products. What are your Opportunities? Obviously, all of the above are ways in which you can use this site. However, you can also use this as an opportunity to test your target market and learn about your target market. For example: If you own a business and you create an “About us” page on your site, when you go out and talk to people, be prepared to talk about what your business is about. You want to learn what people think about your business. Get all the information you can about them, and then tailor your response to them. Are you a tennis player? Get on their forums and have a discussion about tennis. Are you a chef? Be prepared to talk about what you and your staff do and your experiences. Look at the posts that are most popular on your sites. Be prepared to answer questions related to what you are
